

Tackling Climate Together - A Maldives Perspective

The Maldives is a vast stretch of 1200 islands spread across the Indian Ocean. The Maldives is on a mission to safeguard its future and lead change by educating, empowering and connecting an ecosystem of ocean champions. This goal inspires – and has in many ways been shaped by Shaahina Ali, Director of Parley Maldives.

Shaahina has engaged a network of island communities, schools, resorts, businesses, NGOs and government agencies in programs to reduce plastic waste, introduce recycling programs, boost eco-innovation, strengthen existing conservation efforts and inspire a new generation of ocean advocates. From swimming, snorkelling and diving lessons to community education on the impacts of plastic pollution, Shaahina's work has helped people of all backgrounds, especially young Maldivians, experience the ocean and understand the fast-changing world beneath the surface.

Shaahina will share her story and motivations.
